FREE-FOR-ALL BATTLE
ON McADOO, DEVELOPS

WILLIAM G. McADOO

Filibuster will be resumed in gassed Senate

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE
New York—Developments in the democratic presidential contest last 24 hours have been:

A fight to the bitter end against the nomination of William G. McAdoo.

All the uninvited interests in the country are opposing McAdoo and have determined that he will be defeated at all costs.

McAdoo's delegations and managers will not make a fight on the two-thirds rule. It looks dangerous as the unit rule makes it possible for one to hold several state delegations together which otherwise would break away.

The anti-McAdoo fight is being led by George Breuer of Chicago, led by Tammany chiefs and Norman E. Mack, national committeeman from New York. Jim Gaffey of Pennsylvania and Tom Taggart of Indiana, are also in the anti-McAdoo camp.

They are not all for Smith but all are against McAdoo.

In the Senate a coalition between Heney and Smith are denied and it is believed that Heney will be out in support of LaFollette when the nomination is made.

There will be a fight and a bitter one over the platform. It is believed that the McAdoo delegations may have a majority of the resolutions accepted and if so that the platform will be so advanced that it is too much against the traditional democratic doctrine that the 42nd will be taken to the floor and the contest at Cleveland be put in the shade.

The advance crowds here for the convention are larger than have been known for years. All the east is present for the fight.

The Smith forces, it is predicted, will destroy themselves in destroying McAdoo and the dark horse already is being picked.

SCRAPPY SENATOR AND SURGEON IN FISTIC BATTLE

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Washington—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Arkansas, democratic leader of the senate, and Dr. James F. Mitchell, prominent surgeon, had a fistic encounter on the Chevy Chase club golf links, says the Washington Post.

The clash was brief. Dr. Mitchell was struck once and fell to the ground, while Senator J. Walsh of Montana, Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois, and John B. Kendrick of Wyoming were playing with Senator Goldwater, while Edward Clifford, former assistant secretary of the treasury, and his son accompanied Dr. Mitchell.

Those who took the part of Senator Robinson said the trouble occurred after the Mitchell and his son had held up from time to time throughout the green on the 12th hole on which the senatorial foursome was playing. Some sharp words were passed on the subject of golf etiquette, it was said.

Milton Junction—Six hundred dollars worth of tires and accessories were stolen Thursday night or early Friday morning from the Ford garage here, by robbers who gained entrance by breaking the glass in the front door.

The robbers were discovered about 6 a. m. Friday, by Clarence Albrecht, the proprietor, when he opened the store. The robbers had smashed the plate-glass window, and apparently did not open the door.

In addition to a large number of tires and valuable accessories, the robbers stole a 1923 Ford sedan.

Milton Junction is about 10 miles from Koshkonong where the Julian M. Mack, general store and postoffice were robbed Wednesday night. The Johnson Creek postoffice was robbed the night before. The Holman store at Milton was robbed several weeks ago as were stores at Poplar Grove and Franklin.

Mr. Roseland is attending the annual convention of the eastern district. No program was scheduled at the principal address today. His paper was read by Rev. N. C. A. Garnings, East Claire.

Facing a deficit in contributions of approximately $500,000, the convention turned its attention to the question of reduction in expenditures. It is planned to reduce the budget for the coming year approximately $250,000.

DEDICATE PALMYRA DRUGGISTS' HOME

Mandabach Institution Becomes Reality With Ceremony Thursday.

(By State Correspondent.)

Palmayra—Peter Mandabach's dream of a home where superannuated members of his profession might find refuge, became a reality Thursday when the P. A. Mandabach National Druggists' Home was dedicated by the association founded by him, the National Association of Drug Clerks. Thousands attended the old Settlers' day and annual homecoming, the greatest event of the year in Palmyra, held in conjunction with the dedication of the home.

Baseball games and athletic contests during the afternoon and a concert by the famous Luther College band and dance, the band having been invited made the day unforgettable for all. The William Graham Post Dunn Corps of Whitewater and the Palmyra school band, together with the Luther College band, furnished the music during the day.

Convention Is Closed.

Thursday marked the close of the three-day annual convention of the National Association of Drug Clerks, attended by more than 100. New officers elected are: C. C. Fitzhugh, Flint, Mich., president; R. E. Bell, LaFayette, Ind., first vice president; Karl Shaver, Albin, Ind., second vice president; Clarence J. Smith, Milwaukee, third vice president; S. A. Schultz, Milwaukee, fourth vice president; Peter J. Mandabach, Chicago, secretary and treasurer.

Trustees of the home who were reelected are Dr. S. D. Light, Kalamazoo, Mich.; H. D. Clark, Helena, Ark.; R. M. Keene, Indianapolis, Ind.; Paul J. Mandabach, Chicago, and J. H. Steinke, LaFayette, Ind.

Many problems relating to drug clerks and the drug business were discussed by the association. Resolutions were adopted in each instance.

The association went on record against physicians prescribing narcotics, and the use instead of non-narcotics. It is asserted that since the introduction of prohibition, the prescribing of narcotics by physicians has increased.

Crime Law Enforcement. Full enforcement of the state pharmacy laws for the protection of registered pharmacists and conspicuous display of certificates of registration is urged.

Increased requirements for pharmaceutical education with each man being a college graduate before taking the state board examination is recommended by the association.

An appeal will be sent to governors for the appointment of a clerk on the state pharmacy boards. Only 13 of the 48 states now have a clerk on the board. State pharmaceutical associations are urged to give attention to this, as well as to pharmacists in arranging their programs.

The association wants each state to pass bills restricting the ownership of drug stores to pharmacists. The bill aimed at former saloon-keepers has already been passed in New York.

As a result of action taken at the convention, a bill is expected to be introduced in the next congress for the establishment of a national pharmaceutical commission to establish uniform standards after investigating the laws of all states. Every phase of the pharmaceutical business would come under control.

Universal adoption of the metric system and strict adherence to the minimum wage of $2.00 for registered pharmacists and $1.00 for assistant pharmacists was urged.

Selection of the place of the 1925 annual convention in 1925 was left to the executive committee to be determined by the druggists' home, marking only the first step in the plans that have been developed by Paul J. Mandabach. Everything is being built for permanency and one that will assure the perpetuity of the home. There are 50 druggists in county infirmaries who will be admitted to the home but the number of which will be determined after investigation. There are already several who have funds for their own maintenance at the home and these will be given preference.

It will be several weeks before any druggists are located at the home.

No Acres With Home.

The property of the National Druggists' Home offers unusual possibilities for development of revenue. It includes more than 50 acres of land, with more than a quarter of a mile of shore on Spring Lake and the park where for years Palmyra has held its celebrations. Around the other side of the lake are the six million springs of the natural wonders of the world.

Near the home is the mill that will be put in repair and operated to generate electrical current to heat and light the druggists' home. The springs can easily be commercialized. A new analysis will be made of the water and a contract with a large water bottling company may be made. The springs have been cleaned and will be completed.

Part of the lake shore property has been platted and is being sold. The lots will be reserved for members of the association and the park will remain intact.

Laboratory and Gardens.

The problem of keeping those in the home occupied will be solved by the establishment of botanical gardens and a continuing experimental laboratory. Much good the improvement of the metric method may be accomplished through the experimental station. Not only will it be a home for the needy druggists, but there will be restored to usefulness.

It is also proposed during the summer to take transients.

The home will be operated by a $20,000 endowment fund now being raised, and to which $10,000 has already been subscribed.

Built 50 Years Ago.

Built of brick 50 years ago, the large building stands today in good condition. A large portion of the building has been redecorated and upholstered and made comfortable. The rooms have been put in shape. In this work, Mr. Mandabach has been ably assisted by Guy Austin, of Chicago, of the Chicago Association of Stewards, and a trustee of the International Association of Stewards.

Hotel furnishings have been purchased for a number of the rooms and the building will soon be in order. In the basement, a workshop for furniture and other articles which it is planned to repair. Wide porches that extend in front of each on the sides of the building add to the attractiveness of the place that is set in a forest of native oaks, maples, locust and black cherry trees.

ARE ASSESSORS JUMPING VALUES ON SMALL HOMES?

(By Associated Press)

MADISON—A report that the state tax commissioners' investigations reports that honest assessments are being increased by increasing the homestead exemption laws was made upon the commission today by Governor Blaine.

In a letter addressed to the commissioners, Mr. Blaine said he had received numerous reports have come to him to the effect that assessors have increased homestead valuations of those applying for the exemption under the law passed by the last legislature.

One letter stated that the small home which was overassessed in many instances had no justification for increasing values by reason of the $500 exemption.

"By reason of the possibility of some concerted movement along the lines of reports coming in, I am sending you immediately information concerning the income tax assessors throughout the state and advise them that there is no justification for increasing the assessed valuation because of the $500 exemption and that such increases, if made,

are unlawful and punishable."

STORM SEWER IS IMPORTANT WORK

Big Improvements on City's Drainage System Being Made This Year.

One of the most important of the many public works projects being carried to completion in Jamesville this year, is the enlargement and extension of the storm sewer system of the city, providing drainage for every street included in the nine-mile paving program besides several other points. Close to one and one-half miles of storm sewer extensions have been constructed so far and work is now being done on Roger Avenue, Franklin Street to a point 400 feet west.

"The matter of drainage is as important in a city as paving," said City Manager Henry Traxler, "and this year we are to divert as much surface water underground as we possibly can. We are eliminating the covered gutters and providing for the open gutters and providing for the intersections.

An appeal will be sent to governors for the appointment of a clerk on the state pharmacy boards. Only 13 of the 48 states now have a clerk on the board. State pharmaceutical associations are urged to give attention to this, as well as to pharmacists in arranging their programs.

FOG PREVENTS LONG FLIGHT

New York—Dense fog, hanging over Mitchell Field and extending more than 100 miles westward early today, caused Lieutenant Russell MacLean to postpone the flight between dawn and dusk, from coast to coast.

The flight was called off after the lieutenant and staff from the flying field had observed the weather for several hours and MacLean had made one inspection trip into the heavens. The flight may be attempted tomorrow, MacLean announced.

Clouds obtained along the entire route to San Francisco, except at the very beginning of the flight, according to meteorological reports, and MacLean was anxious to take the extra chances caused by the heavy fog. He was dissuaded by Major Davenport Johnson, commandant of the field, and Capt. John Platt, Jr.

WISCONSIN TOBACCO MARKET.

Editor of the Wisconsin Tobacco Reporter Friday says:

"It can be said that the 1924 Wisconsin tobacco crop is fairly well established, with 90 percent transplanted into the field. Growers will move every hour possible from this time to the finish of this work and will be able to pitch in on the various kinds of work in the field.

Some growers report the appearance of cut worms both in the plant beds and the fields, but these pests show no signs of being serious. A few other details are reported pending.

The market still seems devoid of animation. A very little buying of the '23 crop from first hands can be seen.

Midwest buyers have increased their purchases by one car of P. 1 post goods. A few other details are reported pending.

The Spitzack warehouse finished the cotton packing operations on Monday and a good part of Tuesday.

Help went to the E. M. Hubbell Sons warehouse where packing operations were under way.

While farm markets are not so abundant this season the supply seems adequate for all requirements and complaint of scarcity is seldom heard."

Mr. Hughes Does It Politely

The answer of Secretary Hughes to the Japanese note in reference to the exclusion bill is as polite as anything that could possibly come from Tokio and again establishes the position of the secretary as a great diplomat. The exclusion bill was not to the liking of Mr. Hughes. He opposed it and furnished the president with the ammunition by which congress was bombarded with objections. But once congress has passed a law, the president and the secretary must accept it and any effort to discredit the legislative branch with a foreign nation would be outrageous. So

Japan is told that having taken this step, we were entirely within our rights as a nation and internationally. Tokio is informed that the law is mandatory and the executive has no discretion in the matter and can make no changes whatever. Therefore the gentleman's agreement will be abrogated and of no further force after

July 1 and the new law be the guide for future immigration from Japan.

The most effective part of the note is the reference to the exclusion law as carrying out the same principle embodied in the gentleman's agreement and which has been accepted by Japan. The argument, therefore, is that Japan having so accepted the gentleman's agreement, there would be no good reason why a statute law embodying the same principle cannot be acceptable.

This should be a happy way out of the Japanese question. We do not want trouble with Japan.
We want friendship. But after all, Japan has much more at stake in maintaining friendship than we here in the United States. Fanatical outbreaks and threats against the United States injure Japan more than us. They will, we believe, soon die down. Japan must accept the Hughes note in the spirit in which it is written or openly show that the nation as represented by its government does not want to be friendly. If so, we shall be prepared to meet Japan on that ground and in that manner, however much that may be both unfortunate and disconcerting.

With the first hot day the one-piece bathing suit becomes a heated political issue.

Pensions and the G. A. R.

What might have been something of a political sensation was averted by the directing heads of the Grand Army, department of Wisconsin, by the method in which they handled the address and report of the Commander. That part of the report relating to pensions was eliminated and will not appear in the published documents of the organization. The personal opinion of the commander is not the voice of the organization.

While membership of the Grand Army is not a unit on the subject of pensions, the organization is not in politics. Most of the members are committed to a service pension, for soldiers and to the living widows—that is the widow who was the wife at the time the war was going on. Such a pension bill was the original request of the pension committee of the G. A. R., the Loyal Legion and other organizations interested. But the Bursum bill was a complicated affair with such pensions for widows and orphans that it carried far more appropriation than was the original intent. It was such a bill that Harding vetoed and such a bill slightly changed that President Coolidge vetoed.

Commander Eaton did not voice the sentiment of the organization of which he was head, when he said the old soldiers would veto the president's election. The G. A. R. is on record as repudiating this suggestion. Therefore the episode has come to an end. Individual differences of opinion are permissible but no one can commit the whole organization to a political policy. The G. A. R. is not in politics.

Kansas is up in arms against Capper. They think he's a back Capper.

Martin Hull's Reason Is Fundamental

Martin Hull, former secretary of state and a candidate for governor in 1920, has issued a statement that he would not be a candidate this year because he could not afford it. He also tells that in spite of the corrupt practices act the law is not enforced or observed and it takes too much money to conduct a campaign. Mr. Hull's idea is that if the corrupt practices act was enforced the poor man might have a chance.

Wherein he is evidently wrong. Mr. Hull must see that it is not the legal restriction on expenditures that will assist the poor man who wants to be a candidate for governor. Our primary law prohibits a poor man from being a candidate for any state office on his own resources. The cost of a campaign is due to the system itself. It is fundamentally wrong and not wrong merely in lack of observance of a piece of the law. If Mr.
Hull wanted to get before the voters of Wisconsin and simply presented his case in one letter, he would have to pay for stationery and postage some $55,000. That is for only one letter.
Now, will anyone say that a candidate should not be permitted to write at least one letter to each voter? But that expense is $50,000 more than is legally allowed a governor candidate and a poor man could not do it. We would also like to know what element of corruption there is in such a letter as to be barred by a corrupt practices act.

The day has passed when the poor man can run

JUST FOLKS

BY EDGAR A. GUEST.

Washington.—No session of congress goes by without several bills being introduced for the establishment of national holidays. Some one wants to make a legal holiday to honor a famous citizen or to mark some historic event. Congress is slow to declare holidays and a study of the effect upon industry and the national wealth furnishes a good reason for this reluctance. It seems likely that Armistice day, Nov. 11, might be declared a holiday but the chances of that action grow dimmer each year as the event itself fades into memory. Each session of congress since the Armistice, the proposal has been embodied in a bill, but no further action has been taken so far.

A holiday invariably results in a stoppage of work, causing a loss of production amounting to more than the loss of a single day's work. Industry is a machine. The laws of momentum and velocity seem to govern it. Work does not suddenly start, run a course and then as suddenly stop. There is a gradual acceleration to peak or capacity production. An interruption means that the process of getting started again must be renewed. To continue work without interruption means not only the saving of the full lost hold day but of that time consumed in getting started again.

The coal industry furnishes an excellent example of how this works. The total output of bituminous coal in the last week of May was 6,439,000 tons. This was a decrease of 464,000 tons under the output of the previous week, a loss of 6.5 per cent. The reason was that Memorial Day fell on May 30, a Friday, resulting in a complete stoppage of mining, or nearly so. A few miners perhaps worked for a few hours out of some personal whim, but the great corps of underground workers was engaged in making holiday. The following day was Saturday and, in all probability, many of the miners did not go back to work at all, but prolonged their holiday over the weekend.

It so happens that the country is well stocked with coal and the loss of production was not serious. Coal stocks are high everywhere but if this were not the case, the loss of production of nearly half a million tons would be felt. That time is not recoverable is axiomatic. The work which could have been done on a given day but was not, can never be compensated for. The time has passed and the opportunity with it.

To show how long it took to get started again after the holiday one may study the coal loading figures. On May 28, car loadings were 24,439; on May 29, loadings were but 23,333, some miners probably having quit in anticipation of the holiday. On May 30, the holiday itself, loadings were only 9,520 cars. Now on the next day, instead of going back to loadings somewhere around the 23,000 or 24,000 normal for the month, the loadings were but 15,997 cars.

In the anthracite industry the suspension was even more marked. The Geological Survey figures for the bituminous industry do not take into account a holiday which is observed in the anthracite regions, that is, Ascension Day. It falls on May 29. On May 28 anthracite loadings were 6,028 cars; on May 29, Ascension Day, they fell to 1,998 cars; and on May 30, Memorial Day, they were but 21 cars.

The summer quarter will be marked by labor disputes in which political issues will be involved, it is foretold.

Persons who travel by rail should be most cautious and should carry accident insurance this summer, if at no other time.

Persons whose birthday it is have a pleasant forecast for the year. They should be especially careful, however, to avoid dissensions that may lead to lawsuits.

Children born on this day may be impulsed and headstrong, but these subjects of Cancer usually meet with great success and win fame.

In the coke industry production fell to 137,000,000 tons, a drop of 20,000 tons or nearly 12 per cent.

In the lumber industry the same general situation is noted. Figures are not available by days but only by weeks. However, a comparison of the production of the week which included Memorial Day with the previous week in which there was no holiday, shows the loss in output which occurred.

The production of lumber in the last week in May for the mills reporting to the National Lumber Manufacturers' association was 225,000,000 board feet. For the preceding week, the lumber cut was 246,000,000 board feet. This shows that the lumber, including the holiday period, 21,000,000 board feet less than the previous week. Presumably, this loss in production is all attributable to the holiday and the day following.

Shipments of lumber Memorial Day week were 206,000,000 board feet compared with 229,000,000 board feet, the previous week. That the dealing end of the business as well as the actual production end also is interfered with by a holiday is shown by the fact that in the week of Memorial Day orders were for but 177,000,000 board feet while in the preceding week there were nearly 186,000,000 board feet.

This same general rule is to be noted as having its effect in all industries. The coal and lumber industries merely are typical of the whole country. In steel production and in the production of all lines of manufactured goods, a heavy loss is sustained by the intervention of a legal holiday.

Banks, of course, are closed as are stores and offices. Only public utilities and public amusements operate on holidays. These indeed are likely to do a bigger business on holidays than on ordinary days, but what they gain is not compensated for by the loss apparent in the productive industries.

Another aspect of this situation must be examined, however. There is some reason to believe that, in the long run, production would be no greater as the result of the elimination of holidays. Human beings demand relaxation and enjoyment and the dull round of toil requires an occasional contrast. It is argued by some experts on labor problems that the morale of workers is sufficiently improved by the rest they receive on holidays to enable them to more than make up for the time lost through the complete stoppage of work. There probably always will be differences of opinion on this matter. It is an old saying that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." The saying is considered to be as applicable to men and women workers as to schoolboys.

MISTRESS WILDING:

A ROMANCE, BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

(Author of "Scarabaeus", "Captains in Blood", "Fortune's Fool", etc.)

Young Richard Wilding, by nature cowardly, but fired by the wine of Lord Gervase Stowbridge's richly appointed board, dashes a cup of wine into the face of Ruth Westmacott, when that gentleman is about to drink a toast to Ruth Westmacott, the rash young fool's sister. He knows Ruth's love, but it culminates for that reason in his insult Wilding with impunity. But Ruth has learned Wilding's intentions, and now he means to make her suffer through his own farce, for he is with her. Wilding and Richard are to fight a duel on the morrow. That night Richard rides to his sister's room, and, after a few words, is unchained into Sir Rowland Blake, the suitor Richard favors, for he has drawn a bargain with Blake that when he married a quarter of his possessions will be given over to Richard, who is a spendthrift and now penniless. But Ruth doesn't care for Sir Rowland, and some time next day Diana, Morton's wife, falls in love with him. The morning of the duel Sir Rowland appears early at the Westmacott home in an effort to help Ruth. He meets him with Diana and with Richard's trouble. Diana persuades Ruth to call on Wilding and ask him to forgive this duel, is when Wilding is only half killed. Wilding says he will "spare Richard's life and honor if she will do."

"My home is here. You cannot compel me."

"I should be loath to," he admitted, sighing.

"You cannot," she insisted.

"I think I can," said he. "There is a law..."

"A law that will hang you if you invoke it," she cut in quickly. "This much can I safely promise you."

She had nothing to say no more to tell him everything. At the time half a word was as much to Mr. Wilding as a whole sentence to another. She saw the tightening of his lips, the hardening of his eyes beyond which he gave no other sign than she had hit him.

"I see," said he. "It is another bargain that you make. Do you expect there is some trumpery bill in the Westmacott veins. Let us be clear. You hold the where-withal to ruin me, and you will use it if I insist upon my husband's rights. Is it not so?"

She nodded in silence, surprised at the promptness with which he had read her situation.

"I admit," said he, "that you have me between sword and wall."

He laughed shortly. "Let me know more," he begged her. "Am I to understand that so long as I leave you in peace—so long as I do not insist upon your becoming my wife in more than name—will you not wield the weapon that you will?"

"You are to understand so," she answered.

He took a turn in the room, very thoughtful. Not of himself was he thinking now, but of the Duke of Monmouth. Trenchard had told him once, with a certain air of how in his love-making he appeared to have shipwrecked. The curse it was well launched. If this letter got to Whitehall, there was no gauging—ignorant as he was of what was in it—the ruin that might follow; but they had reason to fear the worst. He saw his duty to the Duke's most secret and he breathed a prayer of thanks that Richard had chosen to put that letter to such a use as this. He knew himself checkmated; but he was a man who knew how to bear defeat in a becoming manner. He turned suddenly.

"The letter is in your hands?" he inquired.

"It is," she answered.

"May I see it?" he asked.

She shook her head—not daring to show it or betray its whereabouts, lest he should use force to become possessed of it—one thing, indeed, that was very dear from his heart.

He considered a moment, his mind intent now rather upon the Duke's interest than his own.

"You know," quoth he, "the desperate enterprise to which I stand committed. But it is a bargain between that you do not betray me nor that enterprise so long as I leave you rid of my presence."

"That is the bargain I propose."

He looked at her a moment with hungry eyes, and she found his glance almost more than she could bear so strong was its appeal. It may be that she was a thought embarrassed by the danger in which he stood, which seemed to invest him with a certain heroism.

"Richard," he said at length. "It may well be that that which you desire may speedily come to pass; it may well be that in the course of this rebellion that is watching you may be allowed. But at least I know that if my head falls it will be in your hands."

"It is," she answered.

"May I see it?" he asked.

She shook her head—not daring to show it or betray its whereabouts, lest he should use force to become possessed of it—one thing, indeed, that was very dear from his heart.

He considered a moment, his mind intent now rather upon the Duke's interest than his own.

"You know," quoth he, "the desperate enterprise to which I stand committed. But it is a bargain between that you do not betray me nor that enterprise so long as I leave you rid of my presence."

"That is the bargain I propose."

He looked at her a moment with hungry eyes, and she found his glance almost more than she could bear so strong was its appeal. It may be that she was a thought embarrassed by the danger in which he stood, which seemed to invest him with a certain heroism.

"Richard," he said at length. "It may well be that that which you desire may speedily come to pass; it may well be that in the course of this rebellion that is watching you may be allowed. But at least I know that if my head falls it will

TODAY'S MARKET

GRAIN

Chicago Review.—The break of the hot wave in the southwest, and by a sharp decline at Liverpool, the wheat market here underwent a material downturn and aggressive selling developed, however, and buyers became more numerous on the exchange. Much of the fresh buying opinion that the reaction had gone far enough. Opened prices, which ranged from 25¢ to 32¢ lower, July 1, 1924, to 31¢ to 32¢ off July 4, 1924, were held near to a little further sag and then by a rally to about even with yesterday's finish.

Subsequently the market was nervous with numerous breaks and halts, a big combination of elevator interests was reported. There was talk of liberal export buying, but no signs of actual demand were met at the decline to the advance, July 1, 1924, to 31¢ to 32¢, and Sept., $1.16 to 1.17¢. Better weather conditions caused some down, July 4, 1924, to 31¢ to 32¢, the corn market recovered somewhat. Evidence later of sudden expansion of American demand led later to an advance in deliveries. The market closed irregularly at the net lower to 30¢ to 31¢, July 8, 1924.

On July 10, 1924, unchanged, 30¢ to 31¢ off July 4, and later held near to initial figures.

Provisions lacked support.

Madison Square Garden, New York.—No less than 16 men are certain to have the votes of at least one state behind them in the first balloting on the Democratic nomination for president.

Fourteen of these belong to the "favorite son" class; only McAdoo and Smith have the delegations of more than one state pledged to their cause.

There are 1,098 delegates to the convention, and the two-thirds rule makes it necessary for the successful candidate to corral no less than 732 of them.

As the situation now stands, only 39 delegates are uninstructed and unpledged. These are the delegations of Alaska, 6; Arizona, 6; Colorado, 12; Connecticut, 14; Hawaii, 6; Illinois, 58; Iowa, 26; Louisiana, 20; Maine, 12; Massachusetts, 26; Minnesota, 24; Mississippi, 29; Missouri, 26; Nevada, 6; New Hampshire, 8; Pennsylvania, 76; Philippines, 6; Porto Rico, 6; Vermont, 8; West Virginia, 12.

MERLIN HULL NOT TO BE IN RACE

Black River Falls Editor Says
He Is Too Poor to Be Candidate.

Madison—Announcement that he will not make the race for Governor in the forthcoming campaign was made here today by Merlin Hull, Black River Falls editor and secretary of state. The announcement narrows the race for Republican nomination down to Governor Blaine, A. R. Mirst, Lieut. Gov. George P. Conings, and A. J. Krautze, Wausau.

Lack of funds to carry on an aggressive campaign was given by Mr. Hull as cause for their withdrawal. His statement is as follows:

"Isn't the Money?"

"I expected to be a candidate for Governor. I am not a wealthy man, never had and have not the backing of wealthy men or interests in my political endeavors, and in order to enter the race I sought the voluntary services of a group of my friends in the organization of a committee to assist me in conducting the canvass. My friends do not feel that they can afford to make the sacrifice of time needed in carrying on the work. I am not able to finance the campaign and the lack of money is a hindrance. Therefore I feel that I would be too badly handicapped in entering the contest against powerful political machines, which undoubtedly will be financed liberally from the usual sources of campaign contributions."

"I have received more than 3,000 letters and petitions from friends, men and women, urging me to enter the race. I am grateful to them for their expression of confidence but I do not feel that I should ask their support without prospects of being able to put up a good fight."

Use of Money

"During my campaign as a legislator, I have helped to enact a statute which it was intended should limit the use of money in campaigns and permit men of moderate means to aspire to public service. The will of the people as expressed in the corrupt practice has been to have only unwarmed and evaded by political backers and machine candidates, while the common workers are practically barred, unless they are willing to barter their independence for sub-servancy to some form of political combination."

Although both Mr. Conings and Mr. Krautze have announced they will continue in the race for Governor, reports persist in capitol circles that both will drop out of the running and the contest will finally settle between Governor Blaine and former Lieut. Gov. George P. Conings.

Important developments in this direction are likely within a short time, according to political readers.

Two Get Permits for New Houses

Permits for the erection of two new houses in the city have been issued to Gilbert Monahan and George Husen. Mr. Monahan will build a $2,000 house; Mr. Husen, a $2,500 frame house; 21 by 31, on Holmes street.

Other building permits have been issued as follows:

Garages—A. W. Reid, 229 Glen street, 12 by 20, $200; C. E. Hough, 227 North Pearl street, 20 by 25, $250.

Auditorium—G. H. Cullen, 750 North Buff street, 20 by 31, addition, $300.

Robert W. Bush, 408 State Academy street, $100; and W. T. Flory, 109 North Jackson street, gasoline tank.

C. & N. W. ENGINEER CONFRS ON PAVING

H. Hillman, division engineer of the North Western road, conferred with City Engineer C. V. Kerec this week in regard to paving between the railroads at the Five Points and Academy street crossings. According to Mr. Hillman the C. & N. W. officials ready to do the work this year, but he says the Paul engineers claim they have been appropriated no money for this sort of work. An effort will be made to get both roads together on the proposition so that the crossings will be fully paved this year.

New Books at the Library

"The Fabulous Portles," by Meade Miningerode, which has recently been published in a nationally known magazine, was put in circulation by the public library this week, and is expected to be even more popular than it was when printed in serial form. It is a picture of New York and America, variegated and bizarre, in the days of the famous Elmerダン in "A Dark Bow" directed while the girls round the street, and which saw the rise of P. T. Barnum, the visit of Dickens, and the fatal rift between the partisans of the actors Forrest and Macready.

After a silence of four years, there has been published another volume by Robert W. Service, a known poet, this time "Ballads of Bohemia" and of a little different flavor than any of his previous works. The volume is also among this week's books.

Among the others are "Books in Black and Red," by Edmund Lester Purdom, a "Book about Books"; a volume containing three of the most famous of Eugene O'Neill's plays, including "The Hairy Ape," "Anna Christie," and "The First Man"; "Wandering Stars," by Clemence Dane; "Black Bass and Bass-Craft," which the author Sheridan Le Fanu, describes as the gameliest of fresh water fish; "A Book of Assail," by Gilbert K. Chesterton; "How to Write Stories," a manual by Walter P. Pitkin; "Magic for Amateurs," an explanation of many simple tricks, by W. H. Radcliffe; and

PEOPLE who want a good trip and at the same time a lot of excitement in their day to Oshkosh should take their boat to the city of 3, 4 or 5. The greatest power boat regatta in history is to be staged at the "Swastik City." The fastest boats that ride the waves propelled by explosions of gas will be seen on Lake Winnebago. Spectators will have an opportunity to see hydroplanes skip across the water at the marvelous speed of no miles an hour, a speed that is considered a thrill on land. At least four boats will be entered that are able to hit that much of knots, and better. There will be all sorts of the keenest rivalry with entries from many parts of the country and some from Europe.

BOOSTING some more for home talent baseball, H. L. Hoard, editor of the Jefferson County Union at Fort Atkinson, shoots us the following dope: "We have just as good a chance to develop real stars here as any other town, but it never will happen if we hire outside talent just to give better a chance to make a surprise 'win' or yield to the voice of the Town-pride siren. The gambler is a real menace to the fan who means to play ball. The pale work together for real harm, especially to budding geniuses. Our great Billy Sullivan never would have gotten to the top had we imported outside catchers in his day."

If YOU want to get a thrill of fun in Janesville, take a ride in your auto out to Riverside park, going along the Evansville concrete road a little bit beyond the curve, past the cemetery and entering across the railroad tracks. Prominent will you get a glimpse of what is going on. On the way, if there are six temporary holes are being constructed this year to give the public golf at a small sum for each round. The six greens have been laid out, the fairways are being put in shape and other work is progressing rapidly. The progress that has been made so far is remarkable. On the course, the most prettiest spot to be found anywhere in the huge park and shows the possibilities there are to be had in the city park. A spring has been discovered near one of the fairways and this is to be made into a natural drinking place. The view of the river from the fairway on No. 4 hole is one of the prettiest to be found anywhere in southern Wisconsin.

Tels Spangler's American Indians continue to throw tomahawks with telling effect, but their record is much the same as the Indians at the top of the league—Detroit, is installing an endless shift at the door to first place, had one hand on the knob as the Yanks slept Thursday but a shower of hatchets buried them under 16 to 5 score in the first game—Cobbs trotted out a collegian to preliminary reports, are Pat Page, John Schommer, Sauer and Des Jardins.

Wisconsin will be represented mostly by varsity members of the 1924 nine which had played in the last game with the Badgers and come to this week in addition to Capt. Aschenbrenner, Christian, and other stars of this year. Coach G. S. Lowman, George Rendizer, freshman coach, and other old timers will be seen in action.

WALKER LOOKS GOOD. Despite the fact that he had been inactive for months McKey Walker, the welterweight champion, made a great showing in the first fight with his veteran in their recent fight. Experts are agreed that Walker is a real champion.

E. Jones. When the team arrives, it will be met by the Wisconsin and a score of alumnae and others who are here for the annual commencement exercises. An enormous parade and jubilee will follow. Madison—One of the chief differences between the church and the state is that the church aims to make all men good while the state aims to keep men from doing harm and to protect good men in their possession of the means of doing good. Rev. Jens C. Roseland, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, Philadelphia, declared before the annual convention of the Eastern District, Norwegian Lutheran church here today. Rev. Roseland spoke of "the relation of the church to the state."

"The fundamental principle of the church is love while that of the state is distribution of justice," Rev. Roseland said. "The state uses force as its chief method of carrying out its aim while the church can use only the methods of love. In seeking her peculiar end, she must demand not only that the state shall not interfere with her in the use of those methods from those who would violate the freedom of the church, of her members and of those whom she is seeking to save."

Dealing with more recent relations of church and state, Rev. Roseland said:

"The church as an organization cannot and ought not to engage in secular reforms, political or economic. She always makes mischief when she does. She turns aside from her own proper mission and at the same time violates the freedom of conscience in her members. She can reform laws by petitioning; she can reform politics by reforming the politicians; she can reform business by reforming business men; she can reform society by reforming social leaders. Let her preach the gospel as a rule of justification, but she must preface the law as a rule of life and insist that obedience to it in all relations of life is the only valid evidence of a saving faith."

Morals and Religion

"The separation of the church and the state does not mean that morals and religion must be kept out of politics. That the church herself must not engage in secular reforms is not to be interpreted to mean that her preachers and her members shall have nothing to do with such reforms. That the ecclesiastical organization itself cannot be used to promote such reforms, might not mean that preachers and church members may not form voluntary and interdenominational organizations in order to unite and systematize their work for social reforms."

In concluding and dealing with the relation of the minister to the state, Rev. Roseland declared that too often ministers attain an aloofness from civic affairs. He said the minister should take an active part in civic affairs and that his message to men should not be that of the politician but that of God.

SUMMER NORMAL SCHOOL
Oshkosh—The state normal school will open its summer sessions June 23 for a six weeks course training general techniques of instruction, educational tests and measurements, play and games, physical training for men and women, public speaking, athletic coaching, vocational training, organization and administration, educational psychology, and many kindred subjects.

Leadership in Peapacking to Be Kept Here

MADISON—A movement to retain the leadership in the pea packing industry for Wisconsin has been started, according to announcement by Prof. R. A. Moore of the Wisconsin college of agriculture. Prof. Moore declared that steps have been taken to obtain the assistance of state and federal agricultural departments in improving the industry in the state.

Plans are under way particularly to assist pea producers in combating pests of the crop. It is being extensively experiments are being carried on by the college under direction of E. J. Dudley of the Ashland experiments station.

J. E. Dudley of the U. S. department of agriculture has held conferences with state officials regarding the work in the pea industry. Mr. Dudley explained methods being employed by the federal government in the eradication of the pea aphid. He claims that an aphidose used in controlling the experiments last year collected as high as 85 per cent of the insects. This year, he said, the department is seeking to control work with aphidose and insecticides, and also making a study of the biology ecology of the pea aphid. This is being made in an effort to discover the most economical methods to control the pest.

Among the natural enemies of the pea aphid, according to officials, are the lady bird beetles, syrphid flies, internal parasites and fungus diseases. Experimental plots are being carried on by the college this season to discover the effects of the work of the aphid on the pea and combative methods.

Aiming to get a general distribution of pea inoculation this year is being carried out by the college agricultural bacteriology, under direction of A. L. Whiting. Some of the inoculation is done by the experiment stations. Between 11,000 and 12,000 acres of peas enter into the projects under way this year. It is said.

Some hard guy of the boxing game once remarked "When they come bigger than me I whittle 'em down to my size." That's what Cyril Walker, new national open golf champion and smallest man in the tourney, did. Walker weighs but 118 pounds. Before the play began he lacked that confidence, however. "A man of my size has no chance to win," he remarked. His success the first day gave him the confidence.

EVANSVILLE

BIG PART PLAYED BY C. C. IN G. A. R.

Chamber Aided in Making Encampment Success—Five Recent Accomplishments.

The closing of the 55th encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic marks five months of successful boasting by the chamber of commerce for Janesville and the pride of the city in the achievements of the life of the city. So says a statement issued at the Chamber Thursday.

"It was largely due to the Chamber of Commerce that the Grand Army encampment with its 1,000 visitors was such a success and that Janesville was voted an expression of thanks for the best reception ever accorded a Wisconsin G. A. R. encampment."

An executive committee of 25 with nine other standing committees composed of more than 100 people that combined every organization in the city into a harmonious unit and was brought together by the Chamber. These committees worked for weeks upon the arrangements, and a listing 1,200 rooms for the veterans, arranging reservations at the hotels, lining up the tremendous parade and seeing that each of the allied organizations that were here were given suitable meeting rooms. For months, the Chamber of Commerce rooms were used as state headquarters, but the office of the chamber will continue to function at the same place.

Great Prizes for G. A. R.

Two weeks ago the state convention of superintendents and matrons of public asylums of Wisconsin was held in Janesville with 125 delegates. The work in arranging for this gathering was done entirely by Oscar N. Nelson, managing director of the Chamber, and not to have the work conflict with the G. A. R. parades.

"It is worthy of note that both the G. A. R. and the superintendents and matrons voted that their conventions in Janesville were the best in the history of their separate bodies and that Janesville will live up to its name, 'The Home of Hospitality'."

The year started with the holding in Janesville of the state bowling tournament, which saw 1,100 five-man teams and a great number of doubles and singles events rolled up to its name, "The Home of Hospitality."

Mr. E. B. Heimstreet and the machinery of the Chamber was at his disposal and used constantly. There was a vast amount of advance work and considerable detail during the three days of the meet taken care of by the Chamber. Many conferences were held in the offices of the Chamber by state members.

Great Prizes for G. A. R.

These were record attendance figures that perhaps never will be equaled. An organization of 65 men was perfect by the Chamber of Commerce and this body raised $6,000, the largest amount ever raised in the city for such a purpose and in thing that astonished the state, including 200 business teams which had never been surpassed anywhere.

There was the hotel campaign.

Sixty-five workers, banded by the Chamber, worked for seven long weeks and raised $50,000. It was the result of the citizens of Janesville that the hotel deal fell through. They did their part.

To Keep on Going.

The fifth thing was the members' campaign of the chamber. Fifty worked on that drive and brought in $2,000 more. The chamber was instrumental entirely by local people, thus saving between $1,000 and $1,500, which it has been the practice in the past, to spend to bring outside organizers to the city to run the membership campaign.

"There have been many other less spectacular contributions, such as the work of the credit bureau, the work of the house rental service, the work of the employment department, the work of answering queries, the handling of payments on the Janesville Building & Loan Association, the work of keeping questionable solicitors, stock and other investments, schemes and the like, the investigation of industries that are looking for real acquiring of property, the general information bureau and others.

"The summer months are now coming upon us when business activities become less strenuous, but the office of the chamber will continue to function at the same place."

of the national board of directors of his organization. Mrs. Mary White, Milwaukee, is secretary-treasurer. She represents the Daughters of Veterans.

Official Opening of Playgrounds

Official opening of the city playground has been set for next Thursday evening, when the chairman, chairman of the school board committee in charge. All attendants are expected to be secured this week and will be ready to go on duty at that time.

Considerable work has been done on the bath houses at Goose Island beach, under the direction of E. S. Laemmle, assisted by members of the city park commission.

James Burns, one of the lifeguards, went on duty Wednesday, while William Fehr, who will assist him, is expected to start his work Sunday.

32nd Boys Plan to Send Crowds to Benefit Show

Milwaukee—Friends of the 32nd division boys from all parts of the state are planning to attend the boxing show at the Arena Ice gardens next Tuesday evening, June 24, the proceeds of which will go toward assistance to the boys in their return to school in September.

It is a big boxing show with a double bill, including Tommy O'Brien and Basil Galliano of New Orleans in one half and Bill Gorman, a member of the 32nd division and Joe Lehman of Toledo, Ohio, in the other bill.

Racine will hold a collection of about $200 and Kenosha plans a big crowd. Colonel John Brinkhorst of Fond du Lac is organizing a party to come and so is George Athearn of Oshkosh. Tasty Callahan is handling Neenah and Menasha, while division boys are working up a crowd at Green Bay and Appleton. Al Madison, Roundy Coughlin and Col. O'Connor are getting the boys in line, while at Janesville, Sports Editor Frank Sinclair and division members are taking care of that city and its boys.

Besides the star events there will be two good prelims with Jim Alford and Joey Clegg in one and Jack Jonathan of Madison and Jack Hilemann of Milwaukee in the other.

Tickets are on sale at the usual places, with headquarters at the Gayety theater. Members of the 32nd division committee or members will also furnish tickets on call.

Business men who want to help the 32nd division boys and at the same time do a charitable act for the crippled and patients at Rest Haven, Milwaukee, can do so by buying a few paste boards and giving them to the convalescing soldiers at the resort.
